

I am outraged that Sinclair Broadcasting forcing their stations to air an anti-Kerry documentary days before the election. They are calling it news when it is a smear of a candidate from very questionable sources and should at least be accompanied by a warning indicating this. I would feel a similar warning should accompany Michael Moore's film if it were forced on the public through public airwaves and billed as news.

Sinclair uses the public airwaves free of charge, and is obligated by law to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more of what's good for the bottom line and less of what we need for our democracy. Instead of something produced at "News Central" far away, it's more important that we see real people from our own communities and more substantive news about issues that matter.

Please don't let this happen. We count on the FCC to protect the public's rights. Just like you did in the Janet Jackson decency incident. Thank you.
